

Bookie's Blog, by Grumpy

July 7, 2012. The week that was! I have been told that I was more of an adjective than a noun this last little while. Well if you were one of those affected, then I apologize to you.

It is always my goal to be more like that other one of Snow White's friends. Yes, to many of you, I have no problem being Bashful, Dopey or Sleepy, but you know that I meant Happy.

Speaking of Happy, he and the Sailor man have had an interesting week; somebody please pass THAT story on to me. A TC match, a later change? A pre-register, cancellation, withdrawal, a new pre-registration. Now set to go July 15 at eQuinelle.

The Tour Championships are continuing, and by the time you read this the D class and Mixed divisions will be open {in fact, since typing that, I promised the assistant commish that I would open them all by Monday}.

You are all doing a good job and jumping over the hurdles to ensure the success. There will be one little anomaly in the C class with regards to Pommie advancing; I would explain it but I believe that you deserve to hear it from him. Maybe Pukey J can tell you his rendition.

So this report will bring us through events 115-124. Yes, ten in a week, from Tuesday to Monday. Keep up the good work, Malone, in trying to please everyone with the scheduling.

Burnsy defeated Malone to take over #1. First defence was at Gatineau on Wednesday in the morning... unsuccessful. The second half of the event was better for Malone, and he took it back. Then Woodsy regained it — but that's for next week's blog.

Circular challenges: last Saturday and Sunday, I was involved in a few matches that might cause some confusion for the freshmen. First, on Saturday, Grumpy loses to all three, but they each go 1-1 against each other.

BearCat beat Sully, who in turn beat Cricket, returning the favour to the Cat. The next day at Canadian, ZenGirl goes 3-0 against SunShine (who defeats) Grumpy (upsetting) The Enigma who turns the table on SunShine.

The Commish's Cup

Saturday,
July 14th, 2012
Casselview

Favourites

Slammer Team South

Slammer Team Quebec

Team Falcon Ridge

Team EG

Team Dragonfly

Team Casselview

Slammer Team East

Slammer Team West

Team 3 Putts "R" Us

Slammer Team Central

slammertour.com

Are you aware of the situation when A beats B who beats C who beats A? Well the tied Slammers all revert back to their order before play that day. It will be one of the rare occasions where you can beat somebody and awake the next morning to see that you are ranked lower.

Me and milestones... I just can't get away from them. Although I promise to not bore you too much, here is an update.

Stevie Ray played in his 500th event at Loch March on June 19th {only the second to do it}. I announced a few weeks ago that Ripzone would be 7th to get to 300. Now I bet three others will beat him there. Know who? Four others played their 200th: did you all contact the Tour for your prize?

BearCat is at 95, so his 100th is coming soon and he will be 38th to get there. KidsClub recorded his 400th (#7) win vs. Try4Par on June 11th. Cuba, Chef, Chilly or Rulz — who will get the next win milestone?

I have said enough about Ticklar's 600th career loss. Eeyore lost to Hacker at Casselview last Monday to become the 15th Slammer to reach 300 losses. DeeJay lost his 200th last Wednesday at Gatineau.

PizzaMan had his 100th birdie on tour.

Cuba is at 98 skins, when will he be the 9th to reach 100? June 26th, ProZee was 15th to get his 700th career point. It's not really a milestone but our career eagle leader, Malone, had his 13th to launch him to more than double that over second place. It was the seventh eagle on tour this season.

Will you be the 74th Slammer to record one on Tour? Finally when #102 played in his 51st event this season, he lost his 42nd hundred bone!

#102 – grumpy@slammertour.ca